Sensational Evidence Admitted by Lehman in Geoghan Removal Trial

Governor Allows Reading of Papers Charging Failure of Brooklyn District Attorney To Prosecute Speedily in Drukman Case.

MOVE FOR JUSTICE

Sees No Connection But Makes Decision So Situation Will Not Become a Mystery.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 28 (AP)—The already voluminous record in the Geoghan removal hearing bulged today with sensational evidence admitted by Governor Herbert H. Lehman despite his own expressed doubt as to its weight.

Stripped of technicalities, the testimony was an attempt to prove extraordinary grand jury charges that District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan was incompetent and negligent because he "failed to prosecute vigorously and speedily" the Drukman murder case.

Samuel Drukman was murdered in the Luckman brothers garage in Brooklyn March 3, 1935. The first grand jury that heard the case did not indict anybody, and as a result the political opponents of the Democratic Kings county prosecutor charged that "murder is safe in Brooklyn."

Subsequently Meyer and Harry Luckman and Fred J. Hull were convicted of murdering Drukman, and three others were convicted of conspiracy to tamper with a grand jury in connection with the case.

The wrangling of attorneys over evidence of bribery and corruption, punctuated by the banging of Governor Lehman's gavel, marked yesterday's proceedings.

"In justice to Mr. Geoghan," the governor said at one point, "I am going to allow this testimony to be read, because I frankly do not see that it has the slightest connection with this case, and because otherwise a mystery could be made of the situation."

Charge of Negligence

The sensational testimony, read by the hour, was contained in grand jury and trial records. It related the story, for instance, of Carmine Anzalone, a former clerk of the state assembly, and his unsuccessful effort to pay a $100 bribe to a grand juror to vote against indictment.

Anzalone turned state's evidence and pleaded guilty to jury tampering.

The official transcript in the case already is well over 150,000 words and only three days of the hearing have elapsed. Five of the 20 specifications against Geoghan have been considered.

Eight specifications are under charge one, accusing the district attorney of negligence and incompetence; four under charge two, that he failed to investigate charges of bribery; eight under charge three, that he associated with notorious persons.

Most of the drama of the attorneys' thrust and counter-thrust was lost to the spectators in the governor's hearing room because of the complicated nature of the legal issues involved.

About all the spectators knew was that the governor and the lawyers were concerned over "specification four of charge one."

Actually, the governor admitted testimony of alleged bribery in the murder case, but stipulated that he would admit such evidence only with the understanding that it was not intended to connect the district attorney himself with any corruption.

Asks Definite Reason

Toward the end of the sparring, Governor Lehman insisted that Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd produce some definite reason why he attached significance to delays in the Drukman grand jury hearings.

"You say, Mr. Todd," the governor said, "that because this jury was in session somewhat longer than is ordinarily the case, and because this Drukman murder case was before it for a period of, I think 21 or 22 days, that it made possible tampering with the jury."

"I agree with your honor that the lapse of time is not sufficient to make the point," Todd replied.

"But I recall testimony that the attention of the district attorney had been brought to reports of a rumor that money was being used by the Luckmans to fix the case.

"It devolved upon the district attorney to see that this case was prosecuted speedily and that there should not be long delays in which the efforts of the corruptionists would have an opportunity to obtain their result.

"I will take the specification under consideration," the governor said.

Todd had already agreed that the evidence he referred to did not link Geoghan in any way with the corruption, after Lloyd Paul Stryker, Geoghan's attorney had charged that the bribery testimony was offered "for the sole purpose of prejudicing Mr Geoghan in the newspapers."

There was no hearing in the case today. When adjournment was taken at 5 p. m. yesterday Governor Lehman said the hearing would be resumed at 1 p. m., eastern standard time, Monday.

Seattle Mayor Says Hearst Must "Make Labor Terms" Or Get Out Of Seattle City

Newspaper Head Described as "Menace Number One" in Speech Upholding the Cause of Labor Unions —"Truce Meeting" Turned Down by Publisher, So Paper is Planned "With a Production For Use Democratic Editorial Policy."

Seattle, Aug. 29. (AP).—Mayor John F. Dore, demanding William Randolph Hearst, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer's owner, must "make terms" with labor or "get out of Seattle," sounded the latest note today in the newsroom strike which suspended the newspaper August 14.

"William Randolph Hearst has got to get out of Seattle until he makes terms with labor," declared the Seattle mayor last night in Everett, 30 miles north of here.

It was his second address on the strike which the Seattle Chapter of the American Newspaper Guild called after two P-I employes were discharged.

Refusal of the paper's resident publisher to consider a "truce meeting" and disclosure of plans for a new morning newspaper were other developments.

"Hearst is determined to destroy labor unions and I won't stand by and watch that happen in Seattle," Dore said.

"The Seattle fight is your fight and it is branching into a nationwide fight."

Dore described Hearst as "Menace Number One."

The mayor praised President Roosevelt as "the workingman's friend" and charged Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was "in front of the fight to break down labor."

The speech was given under the auspices of the Everett branch of the Washington Commonwealth Federation, a political organization sponsoring a "production for use" program.

The Post-Intelligencer's resident publisher, W. V. Tanner, rejected an offer of the "truce meeting", suggested by H. Richard Seller, president of the Seattle Guild. Tanner also turned down an offer from Fred D'Avila, guild secretary, to arrange for newspaper executives to enter the building, without picket interference, to obtain records.

Prof. Richard G. Tyler, University of Washington sanitary engineering instructor, disclosed the plans for a morning newspaper "with a production for use Democratic" editorial policy." He said a merger may be arranged between the News, Washington Commonwealth Federation Publication, and the Guild Daily, published by striking Post-Intelligencer employes.

Soviet Demands Norway Expel Leon Trotzky

Moscow, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Soviet government today officially demanded that Norway expel Leon Trotzky, the exiled Russian Bolsevist leader.

A government note handed to the Norwegian foreign minister by the Soviet representative in Oslo read:

"The Soviet government expects the Norwegian government will not delay measures to deprive Trotzky of further refuge in Norwegian territory."

There was no indication, however, that the Soviet government had demanded the exile's return to Russia.

The note made plain that Norway's refusal would prejudice good relations between the two governments and would be considered a violation of international law.

Held to Await Grand Jury Action

Everett Sampson's activities at Hickorybush will be investigated by the grand jury as well as those of Herman Leusenring at whose home Everett was arrested Thursday by State Troopers and Sheriff Molyneaux and his deputies. Sampson was arraigned before Justice Baxter of the town of Rosendale Friday afternoon on a second degree assault charge which grew out of an alleged threatening of William Cassidy with a gun. He was held to await action of the grand jury.

Amelia Brown, 36, negro of Cedar street, was given 60 days in jail on a disorderly conduct charge. Leusenring had already been held for action of the grand jury on a charge of maintaining a public nuisance.

Thursday afternoon the sheriff was notified by Cassidy that a negro had entered his home and when warned to leave the unwanted visitor had refused to go and threatened Mr. Cassidy with a gun. The sheriff and his deputies and State Troopers Reilly and Elliott went to Hickorybush in search of the colored man, Sampson, who lives at 157 Abeel street and who has been in police circles before, was found at the Leusenring place together with Amelia Brown of Cedar street. Sampson was arrested on the assault charge and the woman on a disorderly conduct charge. It is also alleged the officers found liquor in the Leusenring home and in an adjoining building was found a small still. This led to Leusenring's arrest on the nuisance charge and the equipment seized will be turned over to federal agents for their action.

Leusenring waived examination Thursday before Judge Baxter and the other two had their cases set down for 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. They were taken before the court by State Trooper Elliott and Deputy Sheriff Clayton Vredenburg. Leusenring was brought to jail after his hearing and is arranging bail.

Encouragement by Alfonso Revealed

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 29 (AP).—Former King Alfonso's alleged encouragement of the Spanish rebellion was revealed today in further detail by secret police.

Spanish government authorities quoted additional passages from a letter, published first Tuesday, which they said was sent by Alfonso to the Monarchist Ramon Albaredo Such.

They said Alfonso wrote "Go forward with the movement. Respect nothing. Triumph will be ours. I am at your disposal for anything you need."

(In Austria Alfonso's adjutant said the former monarch would leave for Italy in a few days. The adjutant denied reports that Alfonso was active in the Spanish civil war.)

WHITE SLAVE RING BELIEVED SMASHED BY FEDERAL AGENTS

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Rhea Whitley, special agent of the federal bureau of investigation, expressed belief today that government agents, through detention of 25 men and women, had smashed operations of organized white slavery in Connecticut.

Whitley announced the arrests in New York, Maine and Connecticut last night.

Twenty-five of the 25 held are charged with violation of the Mann white slave act and the other 14 are girls held as material witnesses. Whitley said all the defendants probably will be tried in federal court in Connecticut. Their bail totals $23,500.

Vatican City, Aug. 29 (AP).—A broadcast by the Vatican radio station today asserted that a religious reawakening was occurring in Spain. The statement said that although in some sections of Spain churches and monasteries were burned, in other sections multitudes of people begged God's pardon and prayed for the triumph of the good cause. Although in some sections, the broadcast continued, priests were killed, in other sections people publicly kissed the hands of priests in respect and veneration.

Roosevelt Upholds the Policy of Spending to Save in the Long Run

President Expounds on Planning Theory and Emergency Measure to Crowds Who Gather About Presidential Special.

DROUTH CONFERENCE

Will Talk With Two Governors and Senators About Taking Care of States Affected.

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard Roosevelt Train Enroute to Pierre, S. D., Aug. 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt headed for South Dakota's capital today for another drouth conference after a series of rear platform talks in which he spoke of planning for the future by spending and acting in the immediate present.

At Aberdeen and Huron last night, the Chief Executive expounded the planning theory and upheld the emergency practice of "spending money to save money" in the long run.

The presidential special, greeted by large crowds all along the route from North Dakota, was due in Pierre at 9 a. m. (C. S. T.) after a layover last night between Huron and the capital.

Conferences with Governors Berry of South Dakota and Miller of Wyoming and the senators from those states were arranged for the Chief Executive during his four-hour stay at Pierre. Then the special was to go to Rapid City, S. D., for the week-end. Sunday night the President will start for Salt Lake City to attend the funeral of Secretary Dern Tuesday.

The President's conferences with governors at Des Moines, Iowa; Springfield, Ill.; and Indianapolis, Ind., next week will be delayed two days from the original schedule, because of the Salt Lake trip. This also has caused abandonment, until later in the year, of the visit to St. Paul, Minn., and Lacrosse, Wis., for further drouth parleys and cancellation of a motor tour of western Iowa planned for the day following the Des Moines conference with Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas and four other state governors.

Speaking to thousands packed around his train at Aberdeen, Mr. Roosevelt said he had been "doing a good deal of thinking about the future—not just taking care of the immediate needs caused by the drouth this year for we are going to take care of that—I have been thinking more about the future, for I want to see South Dakota continue to grow and prosper."

The crowd applauded when he added:

"I understand there are some people that are not in favor of planning ahead. I believe there are some people that say it isn't worth spending money to save money.

"Somebody said yesterday up in North Dakota that they believed if you could save ten million dollars by spending one million dollars it was worthwhile.

"In the same way, because this is an agricultural section of the country, it is absolutely necessary for you who live in the cities to realize that, too, because there would not be any cities if there were not any farms."

At Huron, the President said the word "planning" was unpopular with some people.

"The reason the water table has sunk so low as it has out here, he asserted, "is that they did'nt think about planning 20 years ago."

RECONSIDERATION OF WOMEN'S WAGE LAW ASKED.

Washington, Aug. 29 (AP).—The state of Illinois has appealed to the supreme court to reconsider its 5-4 decision of last June which held the New York minimum wage law for women to be unconstitutional.

Appearing as "a friend of the court," Attorney General Otto Kerner of Illinois yesterday filed the appeal stating:

"When the immediate welfare of millions of American working women and the constitutional powers of the states of the union are at stake, it seems imperative that there be not even the remotest ambiguity as to the scope of a decision of this court."

The justices will announce when they assemble in October whether a rehearing will be granted.

Bright Forecasts Now in The Business Picture According to Reports

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Calls Attention to Increases in Industrial Production, in Construction and in Employment.

GOOD FOR FARMERS

Agricultural Department Indicates Drouth Stepped Up Prices and Helped Men of the Soil.

By WILLIAM S. ARDERY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 29 (AP)—Cash gains in many fields of commerce and agriculture were recorded today by government and private agencies.

The current business picture, including bright forecasts, covered such activities as farming, building, transportation and industrial production.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States called attention to increases during July and August in carloadings, industrial production, employment, use of electric energy, construction and excise tax receipts.

"All of the evidence does not reflect solely increased spending, either," said the chamber's review, adding that during the first half of 1936 the number of depositors in mutual savings banks increased by 300,000. The total in July stood at 14,340,000, it said, topping the 1929 figures by 20 per cent.

The Labor Department, in a survey covering 759 cities, reported July building was greater by 2½ per cent than that of the previous month, while the estimated cost of new homes moved up 13.7 per cent. Compared with July, 1935, the number of permits for home construction was up 90 per cent and the estimated cost up 182.2 per cent. For the first seven months of 1936 the number of home building permits increased 101.3 per cent over the same period in 1935.

More Money for Farmers

Agriculture Department figures indicated the drouth had put more money into the farmers' pockets during July and stepped up the prices received for their products during August.

While thousands of farmers were in distress because of ruined crops, the figures showed cash income from July farm marketings at $711,000,000, as compared with $582,000,000 the previous month and $451,000,000 a year ago. Officials reported July farm income the best since 1929 and noted that cash to farmers during the first seven months of the year was $4,024,000,000, the best for any similar period since 1930.

While this farm trend was described as "characteristic under a drouth situation," the department statisticians predicted the rest of the year would show larger monthly cash incomes than in 1935. Their forecast was based on indicated "strong consumer demand," and "continuance of heavy livestock marketings."

Railroad Advance

Another sharp advance was reported by the Association of American Railroads. Operating revenues of 113 lines were shown to have increased 27.4 per cent in July as compared with the same month in 1935. Total revenues for last month were $329,571,951, while in the same period last year the total was $266,582,197.

Along with its business review which cited the rise in excise tax receipts, the Chamber of Commerce Review, discussing possible congressional activity in the next session said.

"Taxation can not very well escape attention, for by the end of the first seven months of 1937 there will expire a whole list of excise taxes, out of which more than $300,000,000 was realized in the last fiscal year which closed on June 30."

Saying that the list includes taxes on gasoline, radio sets, mechanical refrigerators, firearms and automobiles and parts, it continued:

"If there is added an attempt at revision of income taxes, and the like, the subject of taxation may again assume large proportions in the congressional session, thus continuing its recent annual role."

Heavy Schedule

The joint congressional committee on internal revenue legislation has "a heavy schedule before it during the autumn," the chamber said, if it is to find inequities and unnecessary administrative difficulties in present taxes and to determine which levies have disadvantages outweighing their revenue yield.

"The field which must be explored for the purpose of identifying inequitable or undesirable aspects of federal taxation has become large," it said, "and is probably much larger than is yet realized by many taxpayers.

"The federal tax structure was greatly in need of general reconsideration before the revenue act of 1936 was added to it."

Thousands Meet Death As Spanish Rebels Conduct Raid On Fort San Marcial

Government Troops Hold Back Fascists With Withering Machine Gun Fire, But Their Supply of Ammunition Runs Low.

KEY TO IRUN

If Rebels Win They'll Take Possession of Area Fought Over For Four Days.

By ROBERT B. PARKER, Jr.
(Copyright, 1936, By Associated Press)

Irun, Aug. 29—Estimates of dead numbered "thousands" today as Fascist rebels stormed Fort San Marcial, key to the northern city of Irun.

Government troops held back the Spanish rebels with withering machine gun fire and still were entrenched in the fort as dawn came. But, the government forces admitted, their supply of ammunition was running low.

After daybreak the battle subsided to occasional artillery firing. A rebel plane dropped three bombs on the government line near San Marcial without effect.

Reports here stated rebel artillery was being reinforced strongly and prepared for heavy bombardment of the frontier zone.

Many Spanish women and children, terrified by the night of battle, sought refuge in France.

If the rebels battered their way into the fortifications, Irun defenders acknowledged, within a few hours "they would be in Irun and San Sebastian."

The rebels launched their fierce onslaught against the northern city under cover of darkness. Government troops earlier had repulsed an attack on the city.

For four days battle had raged for possession of the area. The cities of San Sebastian and Irun had been under siege for more than six weeks, almost since the revolution broke out July 17.

A gateway to the outside world, a seaport from which supplies could be brought in for the northern rebel army—that was the objective. Further, the Fascist rebels hoped to conquer the northern area of Spain to offset the possibility of attack from the rear when their troops marched against Madrid.

Deserters from rebel ranks poured into France. One, wearing a Spanish Foreign Legion uniform, said rebel officers drove their men against the government defenders at pistol point.

He asserted 122 Legionnaires in his company of 150, brought from Spanish Morocco by Fascist rebels, had been killed or wounded.

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP).—European powers sought to "humanize" Spain's Civil War today by springing together representatives of the Madrid Socialist government and Fascist rebels.

A move toward exchange of hostages and other steps were considered by envoys of several countries meeting at St. Jean De Luz, on the Franco-Spanish border, diplomatic sources said.

The diplomats were reported discreetly because they were unable to accord recognition to the rebels without affronting the Madrid government.

Rout Fascist Rebels.

Madrid, Aug. 29 (AP)—Spanish government war planes routed Fascist rebel ships seeking to bombard Madrid today.

The attempted bombardment, fifth of the week, was frustrated by the government when word of the approach of two rebel planes was flashed from the nearby town of Vicalvaro.

Government planes took to the air immediately to prevent approach by the rebel ships and flew in high circles over the city on watchful guard.

Heavy rifle and machine gun fire was directed at the ships for a short time when Madrid militiamen mistook them for rebel planes. The firing ceased promptly when the Madrid troops learned of their error.

Tranquility followed throughout the capital, although a rebel plane had dropped bombs into the ministry of war garden in an earlier attack.

Two were wounded by projectiles falling into the war ministry gardens and two suffered injuries near the Montana barracks, wrecked by shellfire when rebels were forced to surrender there early in the revolution.

In its usual list of citories, the government asserted a Fascist rebel fortification at Lugos had been captured and that rebels fled to the mountains under heavy artillery fire.

Rebel planes bombarding Valencia and Malaga, the government said, were using improvised bombs made from tin cans, indicating they were running short of ammunition.

The government announced acceptance of the resignation of Lopez Olivan Spanish ambassador to London and also decreed dismissal of several other diplomats, including Luis De Oleyza, writer and minister to Caracas.

Drove on Sidewalk To Mail a Letter

Raining Last Night and Anson M. Boice Did Not Care to Get Wet So Drove on Walk—It Cost Him $5 in Police Court—Other Police Cases.

Last night Anson M. Boice, 22, of 37 Harwich street, as he was driving by the Central Post Office recalled that he had a letter to mail. The mail box is close alongside the building and as he did not care to get wet by alighting from his car in the rain he drove his car up over the sidewalk to the letter box. All might have gone well, but his act was noticed by officers Schoonmaker and Murphy patrolling in one of the police radio cars, and they promptly arrested him. This morning in police court the young man pleaded guilty and Judge Cullotin imposed a fine of $5 which was paid.

Boniface Stauble, 22, of Ruby, was arrested last night for operating his car with only one headlight lit and no taillight lit. This morning he told Judge Cullotin that the lights were apparently okay when he left home, and that he had since had them repaired. The lights were tested by City Marshal John Costello at the request of Judge Cullotin and found to be working. The judge then suspended sentence on the youth.

Joseph Berardo of 182 Hoover street was in a hurry this morning and drove to the left of the traffic standard at Broadway and Railroad avenue. Later in police court it cost him $2 which he paid.

The Boiling Point

The so-called normal boiling point of water is 212 degrees Fahrenheit. That is the boiling point at sea level. But the boiling point of water is lowered about one degree Fahrenheit for every 550 feet of ascent above the sea level. Thus, in elevated positions, where the atmosphere is rare and the barometric pressure comparatively low, the boiling point may be much lower than at sea level. At the City of Mexico, 7,000 feet above the sea, water boils at 200 degrees Fahrenheit, and in certain places in the Himalayas at 180.

London Tower Centuries Old

In the Tower of London the visitor to the British Isles sees a relic which looks back upon nearly the full length of England's history. It is rich in continuous associations As a royal palace it outdates the Kremlin in Moscow, the Doge's Palace in Venice, the ancient Seraglio in Stamboul and the Louvre in Paris. The White Tower, from which the castle derives its name, was built by William of Normandy—the "Conqueror." The work was begun in the year 1078.

A Stone's Throw

There is no trolley line in Paramaribo, Dutch Guinea, for there are few places in the city of 44,000 population that may not be reached comfortably in a short stroll—either barefoot, if one is a native, or leather shod, if one is white. Donkey carts and large rickety wagons, drawn by horned water buffalo from India, transport the sugar cane, sacks of coffee, piles of green coconuts and great bunches of bananas.

Tell the Bees

In savage countries and in many country districts of England and the world over, the bees are held to be members of the household A death in the family must always be "told to the Bees,"—otherwise they will be offended and desert their hives, taking away with them the luck of the house. When a wedding occurs the bees expect their hives to be decorated with white ribbon or rosettes. When treated with this consideration the bees are supposed never to sting members of the household. Other superstitions about bees are that one should never shout at them, but tell them important news in whispers; one should not quarrel near a hive, lest the bees fight, too, and destroy one another. Nor will bees sting half-wits, even when disturbed.—Tit-Bits Magazine

As a Banker Sees Real Estate Loans

Describes the Sound Principles Under Which Commercial Banks Can Lend—Cooperate Where Conditions Warrant

By ROBERT M. HANES
American Bankers Association

Commercial banks operate under entirely different circumstances from mortgage, investment or savings bankers, for their deposits consist largely of funds payable on demand and constantly being turned over A typical commercial bank will have deposits composed of approximately 85 per cent commercial and 15 per cent time and savings accounts. Therefore, it must confine the bulk of its investments to short, liquid loans having a minimum chance of depreciation.

I shall attempt to set forth the viewpoint that an alert but conservative banker operating this type of institution may take toward city real estate loans, for banks are rendering such cooperation where sound principles warrant.

Real estate is a basic form of wealth and comprises a very substantial portion of the holdings of persons of means in this country. The prevailing values of real estate depend upon type, location, use, productivity and marketability of the property.

Real estate is not a liquid form of wealth. There are times when it cannot be marketed at any reasonable price, and even under the best conditions its marketing is often subject to protracted delays.

The Attitude Toward Real Estate

Yet it would be a great mistake to say that the average fair-minded banker is taking a defeatist attitude toward real estate. The experienced banker attributes his difficulties in real estate matters to the abuses of sound credit principles in real estate dealings, rather than to basic weaknesses in real estate as a form of wealth or security for bank loans.

Speculation, "shoestring" financing, poor construction, bad location, homes and buildings out of keeping with their location and use, absurdly high appraisals—to these abuses may be attributed the greatest portion of our real estate difficulties Sound real estate operations and financing form the only basis upon which can be built a permanent and mutually helpful business in this field

The Banking Act of 1935 provides much more liberal regulations for real estate loans by banks under the jurisdiction of Federal laws than formerly obtained. If the principal of the loan is amortized as much as 40 per cent during its term, such a loan can be made for a period of 10 years, and up to 60 per cent of the appraised valuation. The aggregate amount which a member bank may lend is now limited to the total unimpaired capital and surplus, or 60 per cent of the time and savings deposits, whichever is greater. These restrictions do not apply to loans under the Federal Housing Administration law which member banks may make according to its provisions.

The Character of the Borrowers

A prospective borrower on real estate should file a complete financial statement. Many real estate loans became frozen because of the borrower's inability to meet the payments according to schedule. Aside from his willingness to meet such payments, the question of his ability to repay can be ascertained only by a thorough knowledge of the borrower's financial condition as revealed by a complete statement, which shows all assets and liabilities, all income and the sources of income, and other facts affecting his financial standing.

In asking for such a statement, the banker is not only protecting his depositors, whose money he loans, but is also protecting the borrower. It is only natural for the enthusiastic borrower, who sees in a real estate venture an opportunity for income and profit, to overestimate his ability to carry out his promises and to lose sight of the fact that adverse conditions may arise which would seriously affect his ability to meet his payments promptly, thereby forfeiting his equity in the investment.

Conservative banking requires that real estate loans be restricted to prime, improved city properties, and not to exceed 60 per cent of conservative appraisal values. We note the construction, both inside and out, the type of the property as compared to its location and its market possibilities in case the owner should be unfortunate.

Schedule of Repayments

A definite schedule of repayment should be arranged. Real estate loans are no exception to the rule that the longer a loan runs the harder it is to pay. This requirement is a measure of protection equally to the banker and to the borrower, for, as payments are made regularly on principal, the equity of the borrower increases and his defense against market declines and probable losses is strengthened.

When we are satisfied with the borrower's ability to repay, and have appraised the property, we are in position to offer a satisfactory loan, running not longer than ten years, at a reasonable rate.

Commercial banks are also anxious to be of service in making construction loans which will be retired by mortgage lending agencies when the building is completed. They are likewise seeking repair and improvement loans, proceeds of which will be used to remodel or rebuild existing properties.

County Endeavor Plans Fall Work; To Begin Sept. 13

The Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union has already commenced planning one of the most active seasons that that organization has ever enjoyed. Since its organization some years ago, the County Union has had its periods of feverish activity, followed closely by times when it was almost doubtful if the group could be called an organized group or not, but this year is being celebrated as the Golden Jubilee Year of Christian Endeavor, and the county group intend to affiliate themselves with this movement in the most active way that they possibly can.

The first organized county-wide movement will be the sponsoring of the annual vesper service at Lake Minnewaska on September 13. This service is scheduled to begin at 6 o'clock, daylight saving time, and will feature Howard G. Launsbach, president of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union, as the speaker Mr Launsbach can be heard twice in this vicinity at this time as he will deliver the main address at the Christian Youth Congress at the Y M C A. Camp on Saturday evening, September 12, when the banquet of this movement is held.

Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Smiley, of the Minnewaska House, Endeavorers are privileged to arrive some time before the vesper service begins, bringing their lunches with them. Automobiles may be driven to the Cliff House. In case of rain, the service will be held on the porch of the Cliff House by invitation of Mr. Smiley. This service is open to all Christian Endeavorers and friends who are interested in this movement.

Leaders' Conference.

Another meeting of interest to society and union officers is the Eastern District Leaders' Conference to be held in Hudson on October 10 and 11. This conference is intended to help in the planning of seasonal work for the county unions and individual societies. Past conferences of this nature have proven exceedingly helpful in Christian Endeavor work, and thus another one has been planned by the State Union.

Fall Convention.

The annual Ulster County Christian Endeavor Convention will be celebrated this year at the Clintondale Friends Church on Saturday, November 7, afternoon and evening. Milton P. Townsend of Napanoch is chairman of the committee arranging for the convention, and has as his fellow workers Carolyn Ryder, Beatrice Powley, Henry P. Eighmey and the Rev. B. R. Branson of the Clintondale Church.

An invitation has been extended to the Rev. Earl W. Gates to be one of the speakers on the program The Rev. Mr. Gates will replace Willard E. Rice as general secretary of the New York State Endeavor Union, beginning September 1.

Other plans for the complete program have not as yet been announced, but will be discussed in a committee meeting that will be held Monday evening, August 31, in Kingston. However, Mr. Townsend hopes to be able to give the Ulster Endeavorer one of the finest programs possible, being in accord with the Golden Jubilee state-wide work.

Banish Tibet Scapegoat When Crops Are Failure

When the crops fail, or other trouble comes on the people of Tibet, the tribe assembles and a goat led by a black rope is brought before them by its owner.

The man pleads for its life, and very likely in the distant past he may have brought his goat as a substitute for the sacrifice of his own. But now the only punishment is the banishment of the goat from the flock.

A white rope is substituted for the black one. The goat is then gayly adorned and, having been well fed, is driven off to the hills, an exile. No one may touch it or lay a load on it. It is a wanderer doing penance for the sins of the people.

In other parts of Tibet there used to be, and may be still, a scapegoat. He was one who was either destitute or had done some wrong. Like the goat, he was first well fed and then compelled to roam for three years in Central Tibet, a banished man, who would have found it hard to live in the bitter winter, but whom none would help.

LACE LENDS ALLURE TO DINNER MODE

Sheer brown Chantilly lace over a brown slip makes a frock ready for dinner and the theater. The high neckline and long slender sleeves, enabling the lace to veil the figure from throat to hemline, add to the sophistication of the frock. It has the raised waistline, suggestive of the Empire line, seen in a number of early fall dinner dresses.

Plans are now being made for the reorganization of the Alumni Association. A meeting will be held at some time in the near future, the place and date to be announced later.

READY FOR SCHOOL

Labor Day is coming, and after it comes school. Are the children ready? Have their eyes been looked at by a good oculist? And have they had their twice-yearly bout with the dentist? Has the family doctor had a good look at them? It's well worth the money to have the doctor, dentist and oculist say, "Not a thing the matter this time, Mrs. Brown." And it's doubly worth it if there's been some trifling trouble growing anywhere to have it caught and repaired in time.

Nowhere in life so clearly as in the medical field does the stitch in time save nine. If some illness of last winter has left a trifling deafness, the family may not have observed it. They may have thought a slow reply due to inattention.

But in the schoolroom even a slight deafness may make a very big difference in the child's ability to take hold of the work. He may lose a year of school, may develop a serious dislike for learning, which a few treatments from the family doctor, taken at the right time, would have cleared up. If there's a wee spot in one lung, it can be arrested and further affliction prevented in a few months of the right regime. Glasses for a year or two may see the child through that trouble. Proper attention now, and the need for glasses may be outgrown. Neglect of the eyes at a critical period may leave serious defects.

No parent should wring the hands and let a child think something terrible has happened because the doctor advises a tooth out or glasses on or regular nose drops or even a few months in bed. Anyone may have a little upset, and once cheerfully and competently cared for it is swiftly over. That's all there is to it. But the little leaks in energy ought to be looked after so there won't be any further break in the dam and lots of trouble.

THE SPANISH NIGHTMARE

Spain's political, military and social confusion has reached a state where it is nothing short of a nightmare. Nothing is what is seems or sounds like. The "rebels" are reactionaries. They are not conservatives as Americans understand the term—slower moving minds than their brethren, but moving. These rebels want to slay the members of the party in power and throw away all modern progress. It's not "horse-and-buggy" days they want to bring back but a strange, half-feudal, wholly tyrannous manner of life which Americans cannot at all understand.

The "loyalists" are not liberals as we know the word. They are a chaotic mixture of all the wilder leftish parties in the world. In spite of their craziness, they do stand for ideals of freedom as opposed to tyranny. But they despise such mildly progressive policies as are advocated by American leftists, and would doubtless consider Norman Thomas a Tory and Earl Browder a reactionary. The very climax of paradox is reached by the entrance of the Moors onto the scene of action. The English Manchester Guardian makes an apt comment:

Wanton and gratuitous as was the action of the rebel officers in deliberately plunging the country into the horrors of civil war, its horror is increased by the instruments they employ. Yet, if Spain is "saved" as admirers of the rebels would have it saved "from Bolshevism and for Christianity", it will be the ferocious Mohammedan troops who will save it.

RICKSHAW PROBLEM.

The jinrickisha, bus of the Orient, a sort of fancy wheelbarrow for pushing lazy people around, will not do in America, even though it did get a pretty good start at the Chicago fair and has been breaking out at various summer resorts and crowding pedestrians off board walks. It gets into trouble anyway, in New York and New Jersey. A college student trying to pick up a little tuition money by treating girls around in a rickshaw at Asbury Park was arrested for violating traffic signals and fined $2 for "disregarding the safety of pedestrians." Efforts of a group of students to run a rickshaw relay race from the metropolis to Asbury Park were severely sat on by Mayor La Guardia, who declared:

God Almighty gave men horses for transportation and also brains to devise locomotives, motors and airplanes. The very idea of one human being trudging along as a beast of burden, dragging another who sits under shade in a comfortable seat, is repulsive to me and contrary to everything for which our country stands.

That may settle the matter. And again it may not. What can be done with college boys who not only want tuition money, but summer exercise for their fall athletics?

MISAPPLIED SCIENCE

Sir Oliver Lodge, venerable scientist, is disappointed with modern science because it is used so destructively. "We know things that never should have been known," he says, "things of the devil. Think of radio, my first love. I never dreamt that electrical discoveries would be used to send airplanes to bomb innocent children. There is a surfeit of science. This world is sick and tired of scientific achievements. The time has come for stock-taking. Science should consider what it has on hand, and concentrate on that rather than add to the knowledge of a world already ill with indigestion."

Many philosophers and humanitarians feel likewise about it. Science may be evil as well as good, according to the use made of it. What matters is the welfare of people, and knowledge is valuable only when applied to that end.

FOOD ALLERGY

We are all now familiar with the effects of strawberries on certain individuals—an attack of hives or urticaria, as it is called. We are familiar also with the affect of poison ivy or poison oak on some individuals and how the pollen of ragweed brings on hay fever in the late summer and early autumn in a certain percentage of the population.

We are learning also of how attacks of asthma may be caused by the fur of cats, the hair of horses, and other substances, and that eczema—a close relation of asthma and hay fever—is likewise in many cases due to foods eaten or substances touched by some individuals.

These individuals are said to be "oversensitive" to various substances and so another word or description of these above symptoms has come into the department of medicine and treatment. It is called allergy.

There is thus pollen allergy, dust allergy, allergy due to metals or other substances used in industry, and also food allergy.

In food allergy it appears that it is the protein foods that are mostly to blame for the allergic symptoms.

What causes food allergy?

As there cannot be anything wrong with the foods, there must be something wrong with the individual. There is something about him, about his body cells, that makes him sensitive to certain foods. He may be and often is in perfect health, but when one of these foods is eaten, definite symptoms arise. And these symptoms vary with different individuals. Take good proteid foods such as meat, eggs, cereals, cheese, milk, which 99 of every 100 can eat without a single upsetment or derangement of the system, and the other one of the 100 may have a one-sided headache, a "snuffy" or "sniffling" nose, an attack of hives or eczema, or an upsetment in the stomach or intestine. These symptoms usually come on within the first hour after eating the food to which he is allergic.

The finding of the particular food that causes the symptoms can be done by the physician who scratches the skin and rubs some of the food into the scratch. If the individual is sensitive to it, the skin will become inflamed about the scratch.

The "home" method is to write down what was eaten at the meal just previous to the attack and thus try to find the offending food.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marion Sims

SYNOPSIS: Carol Torrance's first summer working in Blake Thornton's advertising agency in Atlanta has proved that she could, if it weren't for Blake's older and selfish wife come to love her employer, and he her. Just as matters were tightening up a little uncomfortably Ellen Hands asks Carol to be her bridesmaid and now Ellen is coming to Atlanta to buy her trousseau. It will at least take her mind off Blake's unfortunate position, Carol thinks.

Chapter 32

ANOTHER WORLD

THE next week Ellen arrived, glowing and self-conscious; marked by a new and minute diamond on her third finger. They had lunch together, and Ellen detailed her plans further.

"It'll seem awfully funny to go back to Ashboro as a matron," she chuckled. "The first thing I'd like to do would be to go over and thumb my nose at Mrs. Taylor."

Carol smiled. "Dear Mrs. Taylor! As a matter of fact I ought to be grateful to her. If it hadn't been for her I might have stayed on another year, just because I was afraid to step out."

Ellen looked keenly at her. "You really like it here?"

"I think I do—as much as anywhere. I don't have much time to think."

Ellen was still eyeing Carol shrewdly. "You look a lot better, you know—as if you'd found something. Are you in love?"

"Oh, Lord, no!" The vehemence of her denial startled them both. Ellen said skeptically:

"Well, don't bite my head off. It wouldn't be so strange if you were."

She shook her head. "I wish I could be. I wouldn't deny it; I'd shout it from the office window."

Ellen's eyes glowed. "It does make you feel that way."

Carol changed the subject abruptly, seeking firmer ground. "What's the news from Ashboro? Did Mike ever come back?"

"He hadn't the last time I asked Mack. Annabel's started divorce proceedings."

Carol's throat contracted at the thought of Mike. She pushed the thought away.

"What's the rest of the news: Mr. Hudson back this year?"

"Yes. He seems to be a fixture. And Mr. Hall too."

It was only with a great effort that she could remember the school as a reality, existing and functioning even as she existed. Queer, she thought, how places ceased to be when you left them: you were invariably surprised that they went on without you, just as they, no doubt, would be surprised to know that you went on without them.

"Where will you live?" she asked.

"We've taken a furnished apartment at Mrs. Houston's on Market Street for the time being. Living-room, bedroom and kitchenette."

For the time being. Carol's throat swelled at the courage of that phrase; at the youth and hope and fearlessness of Ellen, who could find her heart's desire in a furnished apartment on Market Street, knowing so surely that it was only for the time being. What's wrong with me? she thought desperately: was I born a thousand years old? She forced herself to say enthusiastically:

"It sounds lovely." And suddenly her eyes stung with tears, so that she laughed unsteadily. "I get positively maudlin when I think how happy you must be."

Ellen nodded soberly. "So do I. But of course it won't always be as good as I think it's going to be. I'm not that blind!"

Ellen stayed two days. Days spent in an orgy of shopping for all the traditional trousseau garments. A "white suit," which meant undergarments of white gossamer, and a bridal nightgown. There was nothing of paganism—to Ellen—in the idea of faring forth upon matrimony in virginal white. She was even planning a trousseau tea, at which these intimate garments would be exhibited to a fluttering and envious circle of friends. Carol remembered unwillingly a remark made by Annie, the Torrance cook, when she was treated to a similar display.

"Gawd, Miss Mary," Annie had chuckled, "you she is plannin' to tempt him!"

Well, she thought, why not? But she was glad, and ashamed of her own relief, when Ellen went back to Anderson. Ellen was a demoralizing influence for a girl who was trying to keep her mind on advertising.

ON Wednesday before the wedding Blake stopped beside Carol's desk.

"What time are you leaving tomorrow?"

She glanced up in surprise, and found his eyes considering her gravely.

"At half-past five," she said. "I think the schedule was arranged especially for me."

"What about your bags?"

"There's only one. I'll leave it at the check room in the morning."

"You can't bring it in on the street car. I'll pick you up on my way in."

She didn't look at him. Does he think of everything? she wondered wildly. Aloud she said:

"Thanks; that would be a help. I was going to take a taxi."

He shook his head. "Rank extravagance. I'll come a little early—about quarter past eight, if that's all right. That'll give us plenty of time. And—I'd be glad to take you to the train."

She wanted to cry: Blake, you mustn't . . . and knew that to refuse his offer would be to invest it with undue significance. And so she accepted.

The girls in the office were excited over the wedding too. They asked innumerable questions, and Freddie begged for a piece of wedding cake to sleep on. "I'll bring you a whole slab," Carol laughed, "and you can all sleep on it—you optimists!"

"And remember all the details," Laura insisted. "So you can tell us about it."

"I'll try. But I'm not very observant about things like that."

She and Blake were silent during the drive to the station. They seemed to have lost the knack of casual interchange, she thought regretfully, and was afraid to speculate on the reason. She tried to tell him goodby at the Terminal entrance but he shook his head.

"Wait for me while I park."

IN a moment he was back. "Give me your check," he ordered, "and I'll get your bag while you're buying a ticket."

There was a disturbing intimacy in a departure like this. In the midst of hurrying strangers you were too completely alone with a companion.

He came back with the suitcase, smiling a little. "I never saw a woman travel as light as this. Irma'd have two bags and a trunk."

"Not for three days, surely. Besides, everything I've got wouldn't fill two bags and a trunk." She gathered up her change and ticket. "Get a porter for that, Blake."

"No need to." For the barest second his eyes were naked. "I'd—rather carry it myself."

He went with her to the Pullman and saw that she was settled.

"What time will you be back Sunday?" he asked.

She was startled. You can't meet me! she almost protested, and realized that he had not suggested it.

"At four-ten," she said.

"Well—" he held out his hand. "Have a hell of a good time, Carol, and forget the office."

Tears scalded her eyes again. I am getting maudlin, she thought furiously, and gave him her hand.

"I'll try, Blake. But—well, this sort of thing isn't quite my lay."

"It ought to be. You're getting too bloomin' serious-minded!"

The conductor was yelling "All aboard" in a voice that rolled like thunder under the sheds. He crushed her hand and ran down the aisle as the train lurched.

He was conscious during the drive home of an unwonted lack of purpose in his movements. His existence and his surroundings were gray; grayer even than usual; and the house seemed empty in spite of Irma's presence and his own.

Irma was more difficult in these days than he had ever known her to be. She made frequent mysterious trips to Dr. Freeman's office, and told him nothing of what happened there. She seemed always to be resting, and refused his every suggestion that they go out in the evening or invite people in.

It mattered little to him that she refused, because the suggestions came from a sense of duty and not from his heart. He had an unconquerable sense of disaster impending, and was trying in the only way he knew to ward it off, but he was incapable of fighting it single handed.

He knew the root of his foreboding and still denied his knowledge. The gray fabric of his life was shot through with an occasional golden thread, and though he plucked out the threads and threw them resolutely away they appeared a day or a week later, brighter and more precious than before.

One day, unless Irma stretched out her hand to help him, he would destroy the warp and cling to the bright weft—to discover perhaps that what he cherished was after all fool's gold.

China, Bowing To Progress, Sends Off For Beer Recipe

Nanking, China (AP)—Chinese manufacturers with an eye to a share of the profits to be derived from the growing Chinese thirst for beer have sent agents across the China Sea to find out how the Japanese brew the ani-brown ale which rivals the native "sake" for top honors as the national beverage.

When Japan, toward the end of the last century decided it was high time for her to become modernized, she did so in a big way. From Germany she imported officers to transform her "samurai" into artillery and infantry leaders and as the pruedanimation of the Japanese army included the development of a taste for beer, the Japanese learned to drink and make the beverage.

German brew masters introduced beer making in China, but for years their product found favor only with "barbarian" foreigners. But there, as in Japan, beer drinking now appears to be linked up with the adoption of modern conveniences. New breweries are being opened in all large cities, and the bottles so familiar to the rest of the world are now standing beside the jugs of native rice wine in shops and restaurants.

Barnum used to say that a sucker was born every minute, but even that won't be enough to pay all the future taxes the New Deal is piling up.

The Chicken's Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE little chicken felt like a new chicken when morning came and Mr. Quacko lifted her wing. Before him was sunlight and his feet felt cool and comfortable and the little ducks were bringing seeds to him for breakfast.

"Now you must tell us what happened," requested Mrs. Quacko.

"It happened yesterday, I suppose, or maybe the day before—I really don't know. It seems so long ago," the chicken began. "I had scarcely left my mother's side as some of us were following her by the roadside when a great big noisy thing came along. My mother said:

"'An automobile! Run!' She didn't tell us which way to run, nor when to stop running. So I ran and I ran.

"After I had stopped running I couldn't find my sisters or brothers, my mother, or our barnyard. I began to walk and walk and I couldn't see anything that looked like my home. I saw a field and I knew there was a field near our barnyard so I walked across it, but when I came out to the place where I thought our barnyard should be it wasn't there at all.

"So I tried to find the road again, and I think I found another instead.

"Then my feet began to feel as though they were on fire. I couldn't see any flames coming from them as I had seen the week before coming from a bonfire. But I was sure they would burst out any minute. It looked cooler between the trees and I thought I would stop in the woods. The rest you know."

"We must find out which is your barnyard," said Mrs. Quacko, and the chicken wondered how he could ever have been afraid of these ducks.

TALKS TO PARENTS

Scientific Rearing

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

"He is not going to be brought up by the old-fashioned, haphazard methods. Don't touch him. He is never taken up, and played with."

Mrs. Smith was a modern mother, her children were brought up by the latest and most scientific methods. For all the joy she got out of them they might have been nonexistent.

On the other hand, the scientific accuracy of their upbringing made them more of a care than the average child and was calculated to increase their sense of importance. If children in the home are to be reared with the impersonal exactness of prize cattle, they would be better off in an institution. There at least they are members of a group and do not feel like rare exceptions.

A certain amount of petting and fondling, even a certain amount of scolding and punishment, are good for children. They feel then that they have a place of their own in the world. The child who does not get these human contacts is like a specimen in a glass case.

Too much attention is bad for them, of course. Sloppy sentimentality disguised as mother-love, nagging and unnecessary correction also masquerading as parental affection, these are, to be avoided. They are, however, less harmful than the inhumanity of so-called "scientific methods."

No one can live forever under glass. Just as the child has sooner or later to take his chances with germs and the dangers of accident, so he has to come in contact with real people. Human beings cannot live apart like so many separate intellects.

It is in babyhood and childhood that one first learns the use and value of physical contacts. The baby who is never kissed, never dandled, who does not learn to romp and laugh himself, is very apt to grow up shut off from his fellowmen.

Queer Names for Streets

Quect and unusual are the names of London's streets. Land of Promise is the sobriquet given to a thoroughfare that flows with no suggestion of milk and honey. For those with a taste for things culinary, there are Frying Pan Alley, Shoulder-of-Mutton Alley, Pickle Herring Stairs in Bermondsey, Haunch of Venison-yard near Hanover Square, and Eel Brook Common in Fulham. Reminiscent of a day when fenced pastures stood in the city is Goodman's Stile in Stepney. Rushey Green has a Frog's Island, and Lewisham a Eureka Place, which certainly Archimedes never trod.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Weeks will elapse no doubt before the full effect of Governor Landon's eastern tour is reflected in tangible clarification of sentiment among the voters.

In his first speech at West Middlesex, Pa., he reiterated his belief in "the American way" as opposed to the New Deal but he left for later speeches any definite detailing of his program such as he promised earlier.

Supplying wants of the people through private enterprise, he forecast, was the "new frontier" ready to absorb the pressure of unemployment. That it would do so was his forecast. The only program evident in connection with it was assurance that he wanted sufficient curbs upon private enterprise to prevent monopoly and unfair practices.

* * *

Economics Neighborliness

REGARDLESS of the contents of subsequent speeches, that first one left many people puzzled as to Governor Landon's plan of attack.

He came riding into the east emphasizing neighborliness and good will. The corps of advisors on tour with him smacked of the simplicity of the shaded country lane. It might be that his plan is to impress the public in these early stages with his personality.

The governor may surmise that the principal pressure for him to go into details about his program this early comes from Democrats who would appreciate any additional time he will give them to prepare counter-attacks.

Whatever his plan, the east's first sight of him may prove decisive.

* * *

Democrats Charge "No Program"

REGARDLESS of how fully his program is stated, he will be subjected to attack from Democratic spokesmen eager to accuse him of having no program.

If eastern voters consider his speeches as offering only meagre detail of his program, can they be influenced by his "get-acquainted" tour to suspend judgment until he is prepared to go further into detail?

There are prominent figures in both parties who, differing with Senator Couzens of Michigan, have declared continuation of the New Deal would menace the American style of government.

Many others, particularly those professing to speak for certain farm and labor groups fear the defeat of the New Deal and any resultant of "the order" would incite dangerous unrest.

All of these must consider the fashion now into the east a most fateful journey.

Fashions and Household Hints for Women

The Lace Curtain Comes Back

Snowflake Used For One New Pattern

By MARY DAVIS GILLIES

Prepared By McCall's Magazine For The Kingston Daily Freeman

Lace curtains regain popularity every year—and this year they are so different from the old kind that they are really new.

Fine threads and fine designs make novel sheer and shadowy weaves which look handsome. The open, airy patterns harmonize with furniture of eighteenth century elegance or modern sleekness.

They look gracefully fragile, but they will last years, because the fine threads are strong.

The new patterns have many inspirations. "Mother Nature" contributes the design of window-pane frost, snowflake crystals, fern fronds, wheat spears and even the zigzag flight of a bird.

Far lands inspire many 1936 fashions for American curtain looms. The most fascinating new designs come from old Spanish altar laces, from the precise motifs of Italian cutwork and from the spidery drawnwork of Mexico.

For the glass curtain in an English formal dining room, for a "modern" touch or for privacy in a smart bedroom, the simple lace curtain is perfect. Rough nets will be popular, of course, but the last words in elegance are the new weaves in American Nottingham lace nets.

Lace draperies lend elegance to a smart bedroom.

Variety Is Style Note For Autumn Furs

Swagger coats of fur, such as the black caracul at left, show the sporty trend in modes for fall. The leopard (center) offers a similar design in straighter lines of rigid simplicity. Also scheduled for popularity this winter is the princess model, shown at right in black caracul with slim fitted waist and slightly flared skirt line. Variety in treatment of pelts also features winter offerings.

By ADELAIDE KERR

New York (AP)—Variety is the keynote of this fall's fashions in furs. Improvements in the dressing of pelts have resulted in one of the most diversified and interesting fur modes in years.

New treatments make inexpensive pelts resemble more costly furs, bringing smarter coats within the limits of restricted budgets. Improved dyes increase luster. Staple furs have been treated to make them lighter in weight and more pliable.

An advanced process gives resistance to rain and sleet. And a wide range of models, from the sports-like swagger to the slim svelte princesse, have been designed.

Persian lamb—scheduled as a leader in this winter's fur pageant—has received a new treatment, which, its originators say, imparts greater lightness and suppleness, while enabling it to retain its weight and durability.

Beaver Clipped For Lightness

Chinese lamb has been dyed a new "ripple grey" and finished with a process which makes it resemble natural Russian broadtail, while selling for much less than the Russian pelt.

Pony is worked so that it looks like galyak and can be designed on a smart slim silhouette. Beaver has been sheared this year, reducing the tendency to curl and giving it greater lightness and suppleness.

Hudson seal—put through 92 treatment steps which take five weeks—has come to town in new glory. It has been treated to a chemical operation said to give it greater resistance to wear, then dyed in a way which, its handlers say laboratory "sunshine" and "rain" tests have indicated, will enable it to keep a lustrous color in spite of the weather. Many lambs have been generally treated by new processes and given new names.

In addition to the new dyes, many 1936-37 furs are finished with a weatherproof process, credited with making them shed rain and snow almost as smoothly as a duck's back.

"Don'ts" Are Listed

Regulation minks, Alaska seal, caracul, galyak, broadtail and nutria also take part in this year's fur pageant, designed on simple wearable lines.

Both the new and the staple furs require care to get the maximum of wear. For the woman who wants to keep her fur coat in good trim, here are a few "don'ts" by A. Hollander & Son, credited with being the world's largest fur dressers and dyers and originators of some of this year's outstanding processes in pelt treatments:

Don't neglect minor rips and tears. Have them repaired immediately.

Don't hang your coat on the radiator when it is wet. Let it dry at a normal temperature.

Don't keep your coat hanging in a hot closet next to a very warm wall.

Don't sit on your fur coat for long periods of time.

Don't carry your bag constantly under your arm where it rubs against the fur.

Designs Also Varied

The silhouettes and designs in fur coats this year are as varied as the pelts. Swaggers are everybody's favorite. They come in straight box-like models of hipbone length and in loose jaunty designs which sometimes hang to the knees.

Princesse coats, cut on slim fitted lines, are stealing a big share of the spotlight, however, and designers predict that their popularity will increase as the winter advances.

After them come a procession of fitted tunic coats and short jackets with ripple tails. Long slender lapin coats, belted and buttoned from chin almost to hem, are favorites for the college girl.

Collars on many coats fit fairly close to the throat and are not very large, though some princesse designs are finished with big luxurious fox collars.

Faces For Fall Reflect Summer's Healthy Glow

Vitality and serenity stand out in this fall's fashions in faces. Skins and makeup must be smooth; eyelashes are brushed with oil; rouge is subdued, but vivid without over brilliance.

By ADELAIDE KERR.

New York (AP).—Fall fashions in faces blend into oriental serenity the healthy glow left by summer's sun.

With the smart world due soon to return from mountains and shore, American beauty experts are concentrating on techniques to preserve their look of vitality: to bring sun-tanned skins to a smooth, creamy finish without passing through a stage of sickly yellow.

Fall beauty treatments range all the way from oils used by the ancients to modern developments.

Oils From Biblical Times.

Experts say that some of the oils and creams which fashionables are using on sun-baked skins were inspired by ointments of Biblical times and contain vitamin F which is supposed to nourish. They are intended to nourish the skin and counteract the tendency to dryness which returned vacationists often have to combat.

Many experts are using a mild bleach to transform tanned skins to a creamy tone without going through a sallow stage. This they follow with a nourishing cream and a smooth foundation for makeup.

Copper-toned rouge and makeup matched by nail enamel of a similar tone are being used by some modish moderns to tone with their sun-tanned skins. Face rouge is sparingly used, powder applied in a smooth even coat, lipstick—often applied with a brush—is added for a vivid touch and the whole effect is one of naturalness.

Eyebrows Not So Thin.

Eyebrows are shaped and not plucked to such a thin line as in the past, while eyelashes are brushed with an oil to give them a soft luster.

One of the most important notes in fall face fashions is an effect of serenity, which suggests oriental calm. Faces should look smooth, and their owners poised. The hair is swept softly back from the face in many of the new coiffures and an effect of sophisticated tranquility is the rule for chic.

Hands have not been neglected in the fall beauty schedule. The last word in manicures is one which extends to the elbow, smoothing the contours of the arms, reducing the dry look of the elbows and giving a well-groomed look to the entire arm.

V. F. W. To Meet In City Where Organized

Denver (AP)—Mam'selle from Gay Paree will bring back memories to World war veterans in Denver September 13 18 for the 37th annual national encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars

And a maid from Brittany in striped apron, will gather the saucers each marked in francs with the price of the drink, an old Brittany custom

A dozen or more of her sisters will grace the information booths in shady places along Colorado highways to direct the 35,000 to 40,000 visitors expected for the encampment.

All of the girls are daughters of French "war brides" and will be dressed in the clothing their mothers wore when they were maids of France.

Pageantry Planned.

Martial pageantry will enliven the program the Colorado organizations of the V F W. have prepared to entertain their guests There will be parades, aerial maneuvers, a gigantic buffalo barbecue and a wild west rodeo

At least 30 heroes of the World and other wars will be here, James E Van Zandt, national commander of the V F W., said recently in Denver.

Among them will be Sergeant Edward F Younger of Chicago, who designated the unknown soldier by placing a wreath upon his coffin in a little French chapel

Others who are expected include Jake Allex, also of Chicago, holder of seven foreign decorations and the congressional medal of honor, General Smedley D Butler, U. S M C, retired, Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, U S N, retired, hero of Santiago Bay, and General Pelham D Glassford, former A. E F chieftain, now chief of police at Phoenix, Ariz

Denver V. F. W.'s Birthplace.

An honor guard, consisting entirely of congressional medal of honor men, will provide an escort for Commander Van Zandt.

Denver, birthplace in 1899 of the organzation that became the F V W, was host to the first national gathering of overseas veterans in 1900, Denver members said A formal ceremony is planned for this year in rooms at the statehouse where that meeting was held

In 1913 Denver again was host to half a dozen veteran bodies which amalgamated as the V F. W and elected Rice W Means, later U S Senator from Colorado, commander-in-chief.

Three special trains already have been chartered to bring the delegates to the Colorado Rockies. An eastern states special will start from Boston, Mass., under the command of Commander Van Zandt, a second will come from San Francisco a third, the Hawkeye special for middlewestern delegations, will leave probably from Chicago. Some delegates also will come in a motorcade from the east and middlewest Convention headquarters officials say they have learned at least three cities, Buffalo, N. Y., Tampa, Fla., and Portland, Ore., will make bids for the 1937 convention.

"Brittany girls," daughters of French war brides of American soldiers, will be hostesses to members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at their annual convention September 13-18 in Denver, where the V. F. W. was born 37 years ago.

Smith, of the 36th division; General J. P. O'Neil, of the 90th; Patrick J Hurley, former secretary of war, O A Davis of New Mexico, Bruce Baird of Louisiana, Governor Landon of Kansas, and Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago.

E F., Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, James Van Zandt, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Major Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the first division during the war and now commander of the third army and the eighth corps area, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of the first division

"Buddy Will Be There."

"You will tell of marching in the rain and mud in blackest darkness, General Buck said in his official announcement to "members of the army, navy and marine corps, and all others who were auxiliary to the military service of the United States in the World War overseas.

"You will again work your way over or through barbed wire entanglements; you will again participate in a trench raid or stand guard on the edge of no-man's land.

"Your buddy will be there, the man who stood firmly by your side in the stress of battle; the man who shared his last bit of mulement or tobacco with you."

Special meetings of regiments and divisions, banquets and balls to be given by various organizations are on the program for the reunion.

Sees Dictatorship In F. D. R.'s Return

William A. Grant, of Grant & Wadsworth & Casmir, Inc, advertising and creative market specialist, with offices in the Chrysler Building, wrote to James A. Farley, Democratic National Chairman, this week that instead of organizing a "First Voters League" for the re-election of Roosevelt, thinking American citizens should form "A Last Voters League" since they were being afforded the last chance to vote should Mr Roosevelt be allowed to stay in the White House.

In his letter to Mr Farley, addressed to the Democratic National Chairman in the Biltmore Hotel, Mr. Grant said

"Hon James A Farley, Chairman,
"Democratic National Committee,
"Hotel Biltmore,
"New York City.
"My dear Mr. Chairman·

"In view of wide publicity given to "The First Voters League," it occurs to me that the oft expressed fear of many Americans, that if your candidate should be re-elected, it will be the last opportunity for Americans to vote for president of the U S; therefore I should like to suggest the organization of "A Last Voters League." It is perfectly plain, I believe, that if the voters of America should return Franklin D. Roosevelt for four more years, that the 1936 election would be the last presidential election held in the U. S.

"In common with millions of other Americans I fear that a repetition of dictatorial policies which ensued in Russia, Italy, Austria, Germany, now in Spain, imminent in France and Portugal where dictators dissolved legislative bodies immediately upon their ascent, will take place here.

"We have gone through an era of "must legislation," fiat laws, approximately 35,000 administrative orders, which leads me to believe that a careful pattern has been laid by those surrounding the administration, which makes "The Last Voters League" the final surrender in America to dictatorship.

"Very truly yours,
"William A. Grant."

HOW TO CAN VEGETABLES

Cut Vegetables in Fancy Shapes

Canned vegetables and pickles—what year round standbys these are! Make them even more attractive by tricky ways of cutting.

Cut some of your carrots a la Julienne in long matchlike strips, using a vegetable cutter. Cut celery and red and green peppers same way. Slice a few carrots across, making "gold dollars." Heat carrots, celery and peppers with young green string beans. Pack hot in cans, placing a ring of "gold dollar" carrots around the can in the middle as in sketch. Use 10 pounds pressure in pressure cooker for 60 minutes.

For a mild sweet mixed vegetable pickle make this pickling solution 2½ cups mild vinegar, ½ cup sugar, 2 small bay leaves, ¼ teaspoon whole cloves, grating of 1 lemon rind, 1 inch stick cinnamon. Boil together 20 minutes. Add cooked vegetables such as shredded carrots, bits of cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, string beans, sliced beets. Let cooked vegetables simmer in the pickling solution for 5 minutes, put in jar and seal.

Success in canning vegetables depends on timing Too much cooking means flat, tasteless vegetables. Too little, danger of spoiling Our 40-page booklet, NEW WAYS OF CANNING FRUITS, VEGETABLES, AND MEATS, gives you recipes and a handy, alphabetized chart for timing of cooking Full details on preparation—hot pack, pressure cooker, used with glass jars, tin cans.

Send 15c for our booklet, NEW WAYS OF CANNING FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND MEATS, to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE E. JAGGER

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Selected specialties continued to mount the stock market price ladder today while most of the recent leaders just about held their own.

In view of the absence of many traders from the boardrooms on week-end holiday, the activity was not pronounced. Profit taking was in evidence throughout the brief session.

Union Pacific changed hands for the first time since Thursday at a 3-point advance. American Sugar Refining was up nearly as much.

A few of the distillery shares pushed ahead as much as a point, including Hiram-Walker, American Commercial Alcohol, National Distillers, Schenley and Distillers Corp.-Seagrams.

American Car & Foundry, Bucyrus-Erie, Atlantic Coast Line and Borg-Warner were lively with gains up to a point. The steels, motors, utilities and rails generally did little.

Quotations given by Parker McElroy & Co., members, N. Y. Stock Exchange, 120 Broadway, New York city; branch office, 282 Wall street.

Divine Followers Purchase Another Place in High Falls

Another property in Ulster county has been taken over by followers of Father Divine, the little Harlem negro evangelist, who has already established several colonies of his followers in the county. The latest parcel of property to be taken over is the former Rosen shoe store property and dwelling in High Falls. This property is located on the corner of Main and Church street in the heart of the village and adjoining the W. D. Quick hotel. The property is also adjoining the parsonage lot of St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

A deed to the property was filed today in the office of the County Clerk. Father Divine was in town during the morning with several of his followers. By the deed title passed from Samuel Rosen and wife of 551 Grand street, Brooklyn, to Victory Luke, 20 West 115th street; Jean Bright, 24 East 106th street; Eva Barbee, 103 West 117th street; John Truth, 20 West 115th street, all of New York city. The consideration given is $1 but the deed contains $7 in revenue stamps.

The premises were formerly occupied and operated by Mr. Rosen as a shoe store but of late has not been so used. The store building is of frame construction and there is also a frame residence on the property. The deed is dated August 27.

Special Game for Big League Scout Today Postponed

The baseball game between two picked teams of the best players in this vicinity to have been played this afternoon at the Athletic Field for the benefit of Mr. Ficiaick, the Major League scout brought here through the efforts of Eddie Coughlin and Bun Rourke of the American Legion, was called off on account of the rain.

The boys should have no reason for becoming discouraged however, as Rourke will go to New York again very soon to make another date for the scout to come up here.

Bad Weather Delays Flight

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—The probability that the bad weather which delayed the start of the Harry Richman-Dick Merrill round-trip flight to London yesterday would continue until Monday was seen today in meteorological reports. Richman, the singer, who bought the monoplane "Lady Peace" in which to make the flight, talked to Dr. James H. Kimball, government meteorologist, who advised against making a start yesterday.

Camp Happyland Girls Give Playlet

Friday evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, the girls of Camp Happyland, some 48 tanned, plump, bright-eyed little girls, entertained the members of the Ulster County Tuberculosis and Public Health Committee which sponsors the Christmas Seal Sales to make Camp Happyland possible, and some friends whom they had invited as graciously as did the boys before them. The entertainment was held in the recreation building which is such a God-send to the camp, so no one had to worry about rain. The stage was mysteriously curtained off and on the floor of the hall were set up long tables which were decorated with bouquets of lovely flowers.

After all of the guests had arrived the curtains were finally drawn and there were grouped the children with some of the older girls standing at the back of the stage, all wearing their sun suits and presenting a wonderful picture of health and happiness.

The guests were welcomed by little Virginia Diaaczok after which the play, "A Day at Camp Happyland," was splendidly given. Much work had been done by the counsellors, Miss Mildred Lester of Highland, Miss Olga Schleede of Kingston, the resident, graduate nurse, Miss Agnes Callihan, and the cook for all those little folks, Mrs. Mary Wolff, and her assistant, Mrs. Catherine Corcoran, in order to present this play, and later to serve refreshments.

The program opened with the singing of "Camp Happyland" by all of the girls and how they did sing. Then right before their eyes the audience saw just how a day was spent at the camp. There were two beds set up on the stage and out of them hopped two very awake youngsters who left their beds opened in the proper fashion.

After singing, "This the way we brush out teeth," a demonstration was given and whiter, finer looking teeth would be hard to find anywhere than those shown when the 48 little girls smiled.

The flag guardian then marched to the front while the piano sounded the notes of "Star Spangled Banner," in which everyone present joined. Having saluted the flag their pledge to our country was given.

Who wouldn't sing, "O Cook, When Do We Eat?" after all that? Yet, "Jack Spratt," who also sang before breakfast, was ready to sit down, too, and tables were all set and ready.

It is noteworthy that very rarely does one hear such whole-souled, hearty, happy and unified singing as was heard at Camp Happyland last evening. It was most inspiring and the audience was of one mind that having learned to sing like that, forty-eight possible home-mothers had learned a big and blessed lesson.

So, singing, "This is the way we make our beds," in a jiffy they were made and very neatly, too. Sweeping the floor, especially under those neat beds, came next. It was all so well done that nobody seemed a bit disturbed when "Inspection," especially as to corners, was the order of the day.

In quick succession followed "Going out to play," "Milk Is Best," "Sun Baths," "Games of Skill," all illustrated in action.

As they gathered for dinner the girls sang a jolly song about Miss Murphy, whom all loving, they watched for her reaction. Miss Murphy enjoyed that song as much as the children did and joined the rest of the audience in the applause.

After "Rest Hour," and a pretty little song sung by one of the littler girls, they brought out their needlework and told of other things they had learned to do besides sewing.

Then came a group of peppy and thoroughly enjoyed songs: "It isn't any trouble just to smile," "Julia," "I'm the Captain," "Under the Chestnut Tree," "Pop Goes the Weasle," a "Round," and "Happyland."

After going through a set of exercises with precision there was a story hour, which was followed by the lowering of the flag, sing of "All is Well," and the play, which had been heartily and deservedly applauded, came to an end.

Miss Murphy, after giving full praise to each member of the camp staff, gave a short health lesson, in which the girls were prompt to make correct answers, and then thanked the audience as well as the staff for helping to make the evening so happy and successful.

One of the most interesting features of the entire evening was the introducing of themselves by the children. Each girl gave her own name, told where she came from and some one thing she had learned. By the time all had been introduced, practically all of the things they had learned had been told in the answers, and the knowledge of health, kindness, goodness, Christianity, appreciation as a part of courtesy and probably other things had been enumerated.

There was just one little seven-year-old boy present who has been there through both months, so great was his need when he came there, in those two months he has gained 20¼ pounds and is scarcely recognizable as the little lad who came there in July.

One of the committee had offered a prize of one dollar to the girl who had gained the most in every way during her stay. Miss Murphy said it was very difficult for them to decide but finally they did decide to give it to Little Rose Marie Hart of Rosendale who after saying "Thank You" to President Judge Fowler, who presented the prize, handed it over to one of the counsellors for safe keeping until she went home. Best of all was the joyful applause of the other forty-seven girls when little Marie won the prize.

The final announcement to be made was given by Miss Murphy who told of the girls being grouped into four teams for competition as to behavior, etc., rather than competing individually. The four teams were known as The Yanks, The Marines, Our Team and The Dunklings.

The prize-winning team was the one which had the fewest demerits for doing things they should not have done or leaving undone things they should have done individually, and the Yanks won the pennant by one point. President Fowler voiced the feelings of all present when he expressed his great pleasure and satisfaction in what the 48 girls, having made a net gain in weight of 20¼ pounds, had accomplished as shown in their entertainment and of the prize-winning team in particular. The Marines were second. Judge Fowler made it very plain to the girls that we need to be good, not just for ourselves, but in order to do our part to bring good things and good acts to those with whom we live and play and have as friends. We do not live just for ourselves. Theresa Hart, captain of the team, received the pennant from Judge Fowler. Other members of the team were Irene Carpino, Mary Perpetua, Rosalie Moore, Concetta Mandrino, Mary Rysdal, Georgette Majestic, Rose Marie Hart, Evelyn Litts, Laura Mitchell, Beulah Ellis and Dolores Allamarde. The prize winners had double portions of ice cream, too.

After the program, the guests and the children were served ice cream and cake by some of their members and the serving was very nicely done. Then came "Good Night" to be followed on Monday with "Good-bye" to Camp Happyland for this year.

And all of this splendid preventive, forward-looking, happy building for the future of nearly 300 children is made possible by the sale of Christmas Seals, in which every man, woman and child in our county may have some part be it little or much.

City Directory Makes Appearance

The new 1936 Kingston City Directory is now being delivered with 17,820 names, not including the names of wives who appear following their husband's name, or those under twenty years of age.

The directory shows a 65 per cent change over the 1935 issue. Seventeen per cent have been dropped by death or removal, 21 per cent have moved into the territory or become of age, and 27 per cent are listed as changin gtheir home address, occupation, or marital status.

Population

With 17,820 names in this area, and using the ratio of two to one, recognized by directory publishers as a fair basis of estimating population, would give this area a population of 35,640. The federal census of 1930 was 28,088.

There are 297 streets fully described and showing 8,150 householders or heads of families.

Special Features

In the alphabetical Charles A. Abbott leads the vast assembly of names and activities, with Philip Zwilling in the rear, with the Smiths carrying the banner for numbers with 184 and the Davises second with 100; and if you want a hard one to pronounce and spell, try Peter Szczypca, and if you want them easier try Wendrychowski or Wojciechowski. They are there.

Business and Social Activities

There are 483 diversified business classifications and 133 active corporations, however, when tired business energy seeks to relax from pressure and find fellowship, it can find 110 social and business organizations.

The publishers have made every effort to make this edition as informative as possible, using painstaking efforts to correlate facts that become a community service when published in book form.

DuBois Gillette Demands Jury Trial

DuBois Gillette, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, demanded a jury trial when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Louis D. Sahler at Stone Ridge Friday. The matter was set down for trial at 2:30 o'clock on September 11 at Grange Hall, Stone Ridge.

Louis Bruhn appeared for The People and represented the District Attorney's office at the hearing Friday and Mr. Gillette, who is a local attorney, appeared in person.

The charge grows out of an automobile accident on the Kingston-Ellenville road some time ago when it is alleged Mr. Gillette's car was in collision with the car of another. After the accident, in which the occupant of the other car received a broken arm, it is charged that Mr. Gillette left the scene and rode with another party to Kingston and out the Saugerties road where later he was picked up by State Trooper Reilly and charged with leaving the scene of the accident. After the accident Mr. Gillette went to the Benedictine Hospital where he remained about two weeks for treatment for injuries which he alleges he suffered in the accident. On his discharge from the hospital he was charged with leaving the scene of the accident and a hearing was set down for Friday evening. At that time he demanded a jury trial.

President Edward Moran presided at the meeting Thursday night and among those present was Frank Lambert, deputy chief of the Peekskill department, who told the boys of the Kingston Association about a plan that had been found workable in other places for raising needed funds.

Informed sources expected early replies from the 13 other European nations to which Great Britain and France had appealed for arms embargoes.

It was regarded as a certainty in informed circles that an international neutrality committee will sit in London when it is formed.

Kisses, Tailored To Order, Fit Any (Screen) Situation

"BOY MEETS GIRL": By Jean Harlow and Chester Morris—85 feet.

"IT'S BEEN SO LONG": By Dick Powell and Joan Blondell—30 feet.

"THANK YOU FOR THE JEWELS": By Robert Taylor and June Knight —20 feet.

"SEE YOU IN THE MORNING": By Robert Taylor (at it again!) and Joan Crawford—16 feet if they are engaged; 26 if they're not.

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"Screen kisses," opines Director Robert Z. Leonard, "are changing. Yep, ever since 'The Thin Man' they've been changing. When William Powell kissed Myrna Loy, his wife in that one, the bottom dropped out of the Hollywood kiss business."

Tawny-haired Bob Leonard has been watching movie kisses these 26 years. As a former actor he once was on the give-and-take ends of movie kisses.

"And kisses," he philosophizes, "are like people. There are long ones and short ones, fat ones and thin ones, strong ones and weak ones. Every kissing scene demands its own kind of kiss."

But this change in kissing, Mr. Leonard, since "the bottom dropped out?"

Now Can Kiss With Impunity

"I mean by that," he says, "that kisses are getting more friendly. People can kiss with impunity on the screen nowadays; they don't have to wait until six reels of romance have been unwound. People seem to be able to take their kisses in stride, if you see what I mean."

But for all that, the "stock kisses" remain, and there—Leonard points out—can be measured almost to the film foot.

"The going-away kiss, for example," he says. "This is usually cool and long—about 45 feet. Sometimes it is accompanied by tears; at other times it is followed by a sigh of relief as if to say 'Thank goodness he's gone—now I can have some fun.'"

Kisses, of course, have been considerably abbreviated since the silent days when Garbo and the late John Gilbert demonstrated the niceties of cinematic osculation. The censors don't like over-long kisses, for one thing, or another, audiences are prone to laugh.

Mother-In-Law Gets 5 Feet

Leonard considers the "boy meets girl" type of kiss the longest today, about 85 feet as a rule although it varies. Shortest, he says, is the "mother-in-law type" lasting about five feet.

Between these extremes are many varieties, like the "good night—I'll see you in the morning" kiss which runs about 16 feet if the kissers are supposed to be engaged, 26 feet if they're not, and the "it's been so long, hasn't it?" kiss like the one William Powell and Jean Chatburn exchanged after all those years in "The Great Ziegfeld."

"This is usually a 30-footer," says Leonard. "but actors have been known to stretch it much longer than that."

Then the "thank-you-for-the-jewels" kiss, which Leonard says is brief but firm, well planted, about 20 feet.

And you'll have to take his word for it. No reporter would be knowing.

The Arabian Nights

The author of the original Arabic work, and the period in which it was composed, is unknown. But the Arabian Nights, as it stands at present, is the work of many hands, and numerous references in the stories show that they were added at different times. The work was introduced into Europe from Syria, where it was obtained in the latter part of the seventeenth century, by Antoine Galland, a French traveler. It was first translated and published by him, between 1704 and 1717.

Early Pueblo People Had Their Balanced Rations

At a time when our own Nordic ancestors were living chiefly on half-cooked or raw meat, ignoring the necessity of eating plenty of spinach and fresh fruit to make them red-blooded and strong, the Pueblo people knew all about balanced rations and were thriving on a variety of delicious foods, declares a writer in the New York Times.

Yellow corn was the staple diet; yucca fruit was utilized, wild honey and sweet saps were excellent substitutes for sugar, and beans were so important as a ration that the Spanish name for bean, "frijoles," persists today in the name given to one of the most famous cliff-dweller ruins of New Mexico—Frijoles Canyon, in Bandelier National Monument, some seventy miles beyond Santa Fe. There were also squashes, edible gourd bulbs of the Mariposa lily, and other roots; berries, pinon nuts and the seeds of certain grasses which were ground into meal on the stone metates, or grinding basins of hollowed stone, pounded with a stone pestle or manos.

For salt, to be sure, the Pueblo dweller had to travel long distances, securing it through mining or barter. Even today the scarcity of salt in some of these remote Pueblo villages is the occasion for seasonal trips to distant points for supplies of the mineral.

By L. L. STEVENSON

It was 55 years ago. William Steinway, founder of the piano house that bears his name, had just been elected first president of the Liederkranz society, an organization of music-loving Germans that has sung its way down to the present day. On him fell the duty of selecting a site for the home of the society. Two properties were available at exactly the same price, one at Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street and the other adjoining it on Fifty-ninth street. Mr. Steinway gave due consideration to the advantages and disadvantages of both. In the end, he decided that the inside plot was more desirable. His reasoning was simple and direct. A building on a corner necessarily would have more windows than one on an inside plot. In those days, windows had to be washed just as they do now. So, with an inside building, the upkeep would be less.

• • •

Other singing societies, including the Arion and Fidelio, came into existence and Park avenue frontage was acquired. Thus, the start of "Harmony Row," the name by which the properties are still known. Also, later, a 15-story apartment house was built on the corner. The other societies gave up and for some time the Liederkranz has been seeking other quarters. Recently, the Columbia Broadcasting company acquired "Harmony Row" and will build a new home on it. Thus, in a way, "Harmony Row" will be preserved. The new building will have frontage on both Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street and will be L-shaped. And the thrift of the first Liederkranz president is the reason.

Encountered an old friend out at Coney island—Rosy. She was the star of Billy Rose's "Jumbo" but when he took the show down to Fort Worth, he left Rosy behind. For some time, she was a lonely prisoner in the basement of the old Hippodrome. Now she's billed as "the sacred white elephant." I first met Rosy years ago. The school children of Detroit contributed their pennies to buy an elephant for Belle Isle and I was commissioned to make the purchase. That necessitated visits to the Hagenbeck depot over in Hoboken where Rosy was on sale. But the decision was in favor of a young elephant that would grow up with the children, hence Sheba. But I got so friendly with Rosy that she ate my straw hat. I guess an elephant never does forget. At any rate, the instant she saw me out at Coney, Rosy reached for my Virgin islands panama.

Always learning something through conversing with taxicab drivers. For instance, whenever a taxi driver leaves his cab to eat a bite, do an errand or anything else, he takes out his card bearing his picture and number and places it carefully in his pocket. A police regulation is the cause. The license might be stolen and put to some improper use. So, if a cop comes along and finds it unguarded, he confiscates it. In order to get it back, the driver has to go to the hacking bureau. There it is either returned or a duplicate is issued. But—and hence all the care—the driver is barred from driving his cab for the next three days.

Still another bit of knowledge was that drivers for some companies must show a fixed amount on the meter when they turn in their cabs. If they don't, they are not allowed to take out a cab the next day. So, the driver, seeing he hasn't reached the minimum, pulls down his flag and drives until he makes it up, the difference coming out of his own pocket. That practice is known as "riding the ghost."

Leave it to a New York youngster to spot a chance to pick up a bit of change. Daily, a bunch gathers at Canal street where automobiles line up waiting to enter the Holland tunnel. They sing to the occupants who toss them small change either as encouragement to induce them to stop. But no matter the reason, on busy days, some are fortunate enough to go to their homes with jingling pockets.

'SLO-O-O-OP!'

Says A Minnow: And Another Wiggle-Tail Won't Grow Up To Be A Mosquito

By SIGRID ARNE

Washington (AP)—Minnows like nothing better than a good meal of wiggle-tails. And thereby hangs a tale of international good will that should make the state department jealous.

Wiggle-tails are adolescent mosquitoes, just after they leave the eggs and just before they sprout wings. So obviously, everytime a minnow stops for lunch he saves human beings that many bites, and maybe, that many cases of malaria and yellow fever.

On a good day a minnow can consume a hundred wiggle-tails. He goes after them something like a spaghetti-devotee goes after spaghetti: "Slo-o-o-op!" and another wiggle-tail wiggles no more.

Thus the minnow is a joy to public health departments. He is "planted" in shallow, sluggish waters over which mosquitoes buzz on summer nights.

Not All Minnows Useful

However, not all minnows are so useful. Some are vegetarians, and pass up wiggle-tails. It's only the "Gasbusia" specie, from southeastern states, that is sure death to the mosquito.

He revealed his eating habits to Dr. S. F. Hildebrand, of the federal bureau of fisheries, way back in 1914, when Dr. Hildebrand was stationed at Beaufort, N. C.

Dr. Hildebrand kept minnows in a tank of water. He spread some of the scum-like colonies of eggs which mosquitoes deposit on the surface of the water. When the eggs burst they turned into creatures that look like tiny sections of a watch-chain with a whisker-like fuzz at one end. That's a wiggle-tail.

It hangs headdown from the surface of the water, breathing through its tail. Then up darts a minnow from the water below. "Slo-o-o-op!" and a whole flock of wiggle-tails are gone.

The news about these Gambusia was bruited about when the World War broke and Dr. Hildebrand was asked to clean up mosquito ponds around large army camps in this country. He did.

Italy Was Jubilant

Slowly, the information spread. Italy wrote for help, and four years later expressed jubilant praise of the minnow. Since then he's been "introduced" to Portugal, Palestine, the Philippines, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Argentina.

Dr. Hildebrand sends off tanks of the fish and grins because they probably arrive doubled in number. A female minnow gives birth to as many as 200 young at once. And she repeats five to six times each summer.

There is one drawback. Gasbusia doesn't like cold climates. He has managed to struggle through the winter in southern Illinois and Indiana, but that was in ponds fed by warm springs. Now Dr. Hildebrand is looking for a northern fish that also has a tooth for wiggle-tails.

STREWS FEATHERS AT BANQUET

Woody Hockaday of Wichita, Kas., peace advocate, "crashed" a banquet at the American Legion state convention in Baltimore, Md., and showered the speakers' table with white feathers, to the amazement of some of the diners. He was ejected from the hall. (Associated Press Photo)

LEAPS 86 FLOORS TO DEATH

Robert Francis Erskine, 23, of Bronxville, waving a cheery farewell to paralyzed onlookers, jumped from the 86th floor observation platform of the Empire State building, tallest in the world, and landed with terrific force on the sidewalk below, missing three setbacks. Police are shown removing the body. (Associated Press Photo)

Concert Season Closes at Williams

The seventh season of the Ernest Williams Band and Orchestra Camp was brought to a close Friday evening at the school auditorium at Pine Grove, Saugerties, with a gala concert presented by the Symphonic Band under the direction of Mr Williams.

The program opened with the prelude and love death—"Tristan and Isolde," by Wagner. This composition was especially fine because of the low tone qualities and variations that were brought out in its rendition. A surprise was inserted in the program with the playing of the "Stars and Stripes Forever," by John Philip Sousa. Then in the way of variation, a mixed chorus under the direction of Cecile Jacobson sang four selections, "O Rejoice Ye Christians," by Bach; "God Is a Spirit," by D. H. Jones; "Will You Remember," from "Maytime," by Romberg, and "Giannia Mia," from "The Firefly," by Friml.

Last night's concert featured the woodwind section of the band, and the first offering from this type of instrument was a clarinet solo, "Concertino," by Weber, played by George Dietz. The audience was so pleased with this selection that they called Mr. Dietz back, and he obliged with another short piece that featured some fine tone quality. After two stirring marches were played, the woodwinds again took the spotlight with a clarinet trio playing "Scherzo," by Tuthill. The members of this trio were George Dietz, Natalie Rose, and Carter Harmon. Following this came "Bacchanale," from "Tannhäuser," by the great composer Wagner. This arrangement of "Bacchanale," by Ernest S. Williams received its first performance during National Music Educators' Conference at the Metropolitan Opera House in April, 1936, by the New York University Symphonic Band under the baton of Mr. Williams.

After a short intermission, play was resumed with the overture, "Gwendoline," by Chabrier, another new arrangement by Mr. Williams for the use of a symphonic band. Then came another march that was a direct change from the preceding parts of the program, following which F. Parker Taylor entertained with a flute solo, "Poem for Flute and Piano," with the accompaniment of Ruth Harsha. This rendition called forth continued applause from the audience but Mr. Taylor graciously refused to play an encore. The reed instruments again made their appearance with a trio, "Ronde des Lutins," by Kriens that combined the oboe, flue and clarinet, played respectively by Madelyn Ellis, Vinetta Boalton and Robert Hoffman.

Because other concerts had featured the cornet, Mr. Williams had determined that this event should be exclusively for the woodwinds, but another insertion in the evening's program gave a cornet trio the chance to play, especially for the last time together, a selection that contained some excellent triple tonguing and tone quality. This trio was the same one that scored such a hit in the Goldman Day celebration last week with their rendition of "Echoes of the Catskills," by W. B. Rogers. The three young people were Madelline Bogle, Leonard Marotta and Donald Jacoby, and once again they won their way into the good graces of their listeners.

The concert was brought to a grand closing with the playing of "Festival March," by Herbert, a selection that was a fitting climax to the season that has presented to the music lovers of this vicinity only the best in music, and that rendered in exceptionally fine style.

A talk with Mr Williams following the concert brought out the fact that the director of this school was greatly pleased with the way the local people were becoming interested in the Williams school and the weekly concerts that the above presented. He remarked that he believed next year he would have to enlarge the grounds around the school building so that ample space for the parking of cars would be provided. The school officially closes today, with the first semester of the winter term opening in New York in the latter part of September.

Amount of Rainbow Seen

The amount of a rainbow seen at any time depends upon the height of the sun, being low when the sun is high and high when the sun is low. On high mountains or from balloons, when the sun is very low, completely circular rainbows are observed. Lunar rainbows, formed by the light of the moon and appearing as luminous arcs with very faint colors, are occasionally seen.

"Coal Trees"

"Coal trees," trees that have remained complete through the ages which turned them into coal, are one of nature's strangest sights. They are found in mines, standing in their normal position and as perfectly formed as the day they reached maturity, except that their roots, trunks, branches and even their leaves have been converted into black, gleaming coal. — Collier's Weekly.

Crusade to Save America, Says Knox

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 29 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential candidate, left with his party's supporters here today the assertion "This is not a political campaign, this is a crusade to save America."

Knox applied this characterization to the Republican drive for November votes while addressing a state wide Republican rally last night.

The nominee said there was today "a call for the same spirit" which guided the signers of the Declaration of Independence. They risked their lives, he said, because "to be free meant more than to live."

"Now again in our time comes a phase when some men seek to impose the same kind of autocracy upon us, from a bureaucratic government in Washington," he asserted. "We are not in a political campaign we are in a crusade to save America."

Knox said the Republican campaign would be "frank and outspoken" but also "constructive" declaring "there have been real accomplishments during the past three years."

"Under the administration of Alf M. Landon," he declared, "America will turn from the wild extravagance, the reckless experimentation and imported ideas of economic control. It will return to the tried and tested precepts, the constitutional limitations, and the peculiarly American system under which we have grown to be the richest, the greatest, and the most powerful nation in the world."

Allison-Van Ryn Gain Tennis Finals

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 29 (AP).—Defending champions Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn drew their sixth national doubles tennis final match since 1930 at Longwood today, opposing last year's runnersup, Don Budge and Gene Mako, the California youngsters who won their Davis Cup team berths this season.

When these teams last met here Allison and Van Ryn defeated the Davis Cup team in a five-set match to gain their second national doubles titles. Since then, however, they had clashed 10 times and every victory has been won by Budge and Mako, including four Davis Cup test matches.

At Rye two weeks ago, Allison and Van Ryn swept the first two sets against Budge and Mako and had a 5-1 lead in the fifth before they cracked wide open.

Another set of defending champions attempted to retain their crowns.

Helen Jacobs, national and Wimbledon singles queen, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, who have held the women's team titles for the past two years, sought to make it three in a row against Mrs. Van Ryn and Carolin Babcock of Los Angeles.

Jack Dempsey Is Proud Papa Again, Has 2nd Daughter

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Jack Dempsey wore a broad grin today. He was "tickled to death."

"And why not?" the old Manassa Mauler asked.

A second daughter was born last night to Mrs. Jack Dempsey, the former Hannah Williams of Broadway musical comedy fame.

Out in the kitchen of his restaurant, where the former world heavyweight champion received the glad hand from his friends some two hours after the baby's birth, the chef confided that Dempsey jokingly told him:

"I'll have to get a steady job now. The family's growing."

"She's pretty as a picture and a husky miss," Jack said. "Eight pounds, nine ounces. Now two fine daughters. What more could a man ask?"

The Dempseys were married in July, 1933, and their first daughter, Joan Hannah, was born August 4, 1934.

"Joan's a fine little girl and I know she'll like her new sister," Dempsey said.

"Were you perhaps a little bit disappointed it wasn't a boy?" a friend queried.

"No siree. Boy or girl it was okay with us. I won all my bets. I had a hunch it was going to be a girl all along. Hannah's fine and we're mighty happy—plenty proud," he shot right back.

Samuel Walker, a slightly graying Charleston, S. C., negro who was chief cook in the Manassa Mauler's training camp when Dempsey ruled the flistic world, confided that "Mr. Dempsey mighta liked it pretty well anyhow if it had been a boy."

The baby's birth was a climax to a busy day for Dempsey. He saw a friend off on a liner yesterday morning, then as chairman of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's sports committee met the liner Roosevelt to aid in welcoming returning Olympic athletes.

It was while he was meeting the Roosevelt that Dempsey received the message that his wife had gone to Polyclinic Hospital, friends said. He left the hospital to return in an hour or so last night, got a telephone call to hurry over, and hardly had arrived when the baby was born.

"What are you going to name her?"

"Oh! That's up to Hannah. She's got three or four names picked out. Whatever she likes will suit me," Dempsey said.

Windstorm Raises Havoc in the West

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 29 (AP).—Estimating at "between $500,000 and $700,000" the damage caused here by a windstorm which took one life before lashing eastward, City Engineer Robert Paige said today the work of removing debris and remodeling buildings would require "several days."

Terre Haute's 63,000 residents arose after a hectic night to see trees lying in the streets, electric and interurban lines down, homes unroofed, smoke-stacks on the ground, automobiles damaged and windows shattered.

City officials ordered parks and cemeteries closed until uprooted trees could be cleared away. Street car, telephone and electric service gradually was restored.

The gale swept eastward to Brazil, Ind., plunging that town into darkness and flooding basements and streets; to Putnamville and Greencastle, disrupting telephone and electric service and unroofing homes; to Newcastle, Shelbyville, and to Richmond, creating similar havoc, and then into Ohio.

Six-year-old Bobby Baker was killed instantly here when a tree fell on a tent in which he was living. His mother, Mrs. Bertha Reynolds, suffered a broken back and a fractured arm.

O. E. Moery, assistant meteorologist, described the gale as "nearly a tornado."

Chef Off Duty For Ten Days.

Thomas Johnsen, 40, who gave his residence as Fulton street, New York city, and his birthplace as Catskill, was arrested at Milton Friday by Trooper Nolan on a charge of public intoxication. He was arraigned before Justice Philip A. Lyon, who committed him to the Ulster county jail for ten days. Thomas said that he was a chef and intimated that he was right there with the goods when it came to doing anything in his line of work.

Final Honors for Secretary Dern

Washington, Aug. 29 (AP).—With guns firing salutes from all army posts in the area, the capital paid final honors today to George Henry Dern, secretary of war.

Top ranking officials of military and civil branches of the government were to accompany the body of the cabinet officer back to his home state, Utah, after services here.

Funeral plans called for the transfer of the body from Walter Reed Hospital, where Secretary Dern died Thursday, to Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, with cabinet officials and General Malin Craig, chief of staff, acting as pall bearers.

After services at 4 p. m. (E. S. T.) with the Rev. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy officiating in the presence of high officials and members of the diplomatic corps, the cortege was to proceed to the Union Station, escorted by the second squadron of the Third Cavalry and the first battalion of the 16th Field Artillery.

At the station, the procession was to be received by a guard of honor consisting of a battalion of infantry and a battalion of engineers.

Aboard the funeral train to Salt Lake City will go Mrs. Dern and the family, and a cabinet delegation including Secretary Roper; Attorney General Cummings; Harry H. Woodring, acting secretary of war; Admiral William H. Standley, acting secretary of the navy; and Edward F. McGrady, acting secretary of labor. They will be accompanied by General Craig.

At Salt Lake City on Tuesday, with President Roosevelt in attendance, final rites will be held in the Great Mormon Tabernacle and burial will follow with full military and Masonic rites in the Mount Olivet cemetery.

Secretary Hull remained in Washington at the special request of President Roosevelt, who delegated him as acting head of the government.

Entire Rumanian Cabinet Resigns

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 29 (AP).—It was reported today that the entire Rumanian cabinet had handed in a collective resignation which was accepted by King Carol.

It was reported that George Tatarescu, premier and minister of war, had been asked by the king to form a new cabinet.

In mid July reports were current that Premier George Tatarescu and his government would resign following demands from Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu that there should be a retreat from the Nazi policy which the premier was said to be tolerating.

The foreign minister complained the anti-Jewish and Nazi programs in Rumania embarrassed him in negotiations with France and Great Britain.

Present members of the cabinet were named January 10, 1934, and Tatarescu and Titulescu have been considered its strongest men.

Broadway: "His Brother's Wife." Science and romance battle each other to the very finish in the feature picture at the Broadway, the story of a young doctor who sacrifices love for scientific research and after returning from an expedition in South America this young man finds that his brother has married the girl he left behind. Complication follows complication and misunderstanding almost wrecks several lives before the mess is straightened out. The picture co-stars the handsome Robert Taylor, latest of the screen Romeos, and Barbara Stanwyck. Others in the large cast include Jean Hersholt, Joseph Calleia, Jed Prouty and John Eldredge. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presentation directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

Kingston: "Green Pastures." Marc Connelly's beautiful story of creation, a play which captured the hearts of thousands of people during its popular run on Broadway, comes now in motion picture form under the Warner Brothers banner and the joint direction of Marc Connelly and William Keighley. The picture begins in a negro Sunday School in the deep south when the negro children ask the teacher what heaven was like before the world was created. So the play goes spinning off into the yesterday of time and tells of the world's creation, the sins of man and the trust in God who takes care of His own despite the wickedness of humanity. It's a beautiful study in religion and the screen play has been handled with skill and originality. The cast includes Rex Ingram, Oscar Polk, Eddie Anderson, Frank Wilson, George Reed and Al Stokes. An unusual, don't miss attraction.

Orpheum: "Private Number." The old struggle of class against class crops up again in the Orpheum feature, the history of a servant girl in a wealthy family who falls in love and marries the young heir to the family millions. Fortunately, this play is light and brisk in treatment and well played by Loretta Young and Robert Taylor. The settings are lavish and the whole thing is a glittering romantic spectacle. Patsy Kelly and Basil Rathbone are excellent in featured roles.

Tomorrow.

Broadway: Same.

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Nobody's Fool" and "Silver Spurs". How some city slickers attempt to take a sucker for a ride is engagingly brought out in the comedy part of the Orpheum double feature bill with Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell and Cesar Romero in the important roles. "Silver Spurs" is a western melodrama with Buck Jones riding high, wide and handsome in the hero role. "Undersea Kingdom" adds another chapter as an additional feature on the Sunday bill.

Landon to Speak in New York Oct. 29

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 29 (AP).—A quiet week-end in the country with close advisers was planned today by Gov. Alf M. Landon.

After his drouth conference with President Roosevelt in Des Moines, September 3, the Republican presidential nominee looked forward to a period of rest before resuming his campaign in a mid-September tour of Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana, with principal speeches tentatively scheduled for Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis.

A second invasion of the East, culminating in an address in Madison Square Garden, New York, probably October 29, was announced for Landon by John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman, at Chicago. Hamilton said other speeches might be made at Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Two Shot Down On Lower East Side

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Police sought a solution today to the mysterious slaying on the lower east side shortly after midnight of Jacob Avnet and a man tentatively identified as Morris (Mush) Fried. Both were 25.

The two were shot, officers said, apparently when called from their car to talk to occupants of a sedan that had pulled up diagonally to the curb, blocking their way.

Avnet died almost instantly of a bullet in the heart, and Fried, shot in the abdomen, lived only a few minutes after he was taken to Gouveneur Hospital.

Police said they believed Avnet, accompanied by Fried, was driving a coupe owned by his cousin, Samuel Avnet, through Rutgers Place just before the shooting. Deputy Chief Inspectors Edward A. Bracken and Francis J. Kear investigated with a squad of officers.

Samuel Avnet was sitting at the front of his home nearby when the shooting started, but told the officers he ran inside, not knowing what it was. Detective James Mulligan took him in custody for questioning.

The motor of the Avnet coupe was running when the police arrived. Avnet had staggered to the sidewalk near the sedan, and Fried had fallen in the street two feet in front of it.

Detectives said they believed the sedan was stolen and would prove useless as a clue. Occupants left both of its doors open, indicating a hasty departure.

Woodstock Driver Must Show License

Cars driven by Harry Weiner, 38, of 1105 Jerome avenue, New York, who was driving toward his summer home at Highmount and Paul Fiene, 37, Woodstock sculptor, driving toward Kingston, hooked left front wheels and fenders, opposite the Loren Shultis place at Stony Hollow, about 10 o'clock last night.

The long argument which followed the collision and the wait until tow cars from Woodstock and Kingston could remove the damaged cars, with necessity for handling traffic, kept Deputy Sheriffs Vredenburg and McCullough busy in the rain for a couple of hours.

Weiner arrested Fiene on a charge of reckless driving and the officers also charged him with having no registration or operator's license. He was taken before Justice William Urell, who gave him until 1:30 today to produce his license. The reckless driving charge was withdrawn as was a similar charge which had been preferred by Fiene against Weiner.
